Unboxing Your Pillow

Congratulations on receiving your Sutera Orthopedic Contour Pillow! You are just moments away from unbelievable sleep.

Once you receive your pillow, we recommend that you carefully remove the pillow from the sealed packaging and allow it to fully relax and unfurl for a few hours before utilizing it.

Important Notes:

- It is natural for new memory foam pillows to give off a chemical-like smell. This is called off-gassing and quite similar to the smell coming from the interiors of a brand new car, the smell of dry cleaning. Our pillow gets packaged immediately right out of production, and it may sometimes emit an odor when opened as a result of the manufacturing and sealing process and is very common in production of memory foam. Memory foams are usually manufactured using petroleum-based products and chemicals like fire-retardants to comply with federal standards.
- The “new memory pillow smell” is not dangerous to your health and dissipates in a few days up to a week. To some people, the temporary scent is completely manageable, but some people that are sensitive to smells, it may be intolerable to sleep on when first unboxed.

Here are a few tips on how to remove the “new pillow smell” from your Sutera Memory Foam Pillow more quickly:

- We recommend that you air out the Sutera Memory Foam Pillows for three to seven days in a well-ventilated area. First, remove the pillow from the packaging. If there is a chance, it is best to place the pillow outside on a non-humid day where it can be aired as much as it can. The porch or garage works great to air your pillow. If the outdoors is not suitable, you may place the pillow in a room where you can open the window and with the optimum air circulation.
- After airing, a bit of baking soda can also help deodorize your memory foam pillow. Simply sprinkle baking soda all over the pillow and let sit for an hour. Then, use a vacuum cleaner to remove the baking soda.
- Let your nose be the judge. Once the strong chemical smell is gone, it is ready for use. You can now have the most relaxing sleep of your life!
